

Anne B. Shlay, Ph.D.
Temple University

Anne B. Shlay is a Professor of Sociology at Temple University. She is an urban sociologist with long standing interests in the effects of institutions on inequality through shaping spatial patterns. Her recent work is examining the politics of rental housing, the effects of Hope VI on gentrification, spatial battles in Jerusalem, and the role of metropolitan development in the Palestinian Israeli conflict. Recent publications are in City and Community and Cityscape. With Gillad Rosen, she is writing a book on Jerusalem.
